CONTENTS.

N° I. Introductory Paper—Sect of the Loungers deſcribed—Some account of the author, and the entertainment promiſed his readers in the ſucceeding Numbers.

N° II. Delineation of the ſeveral ſpecies and genera of Wits—Compared to Ventriloquiſts—Mr. Hercules Armſtrong the moſt famous of the Manual Wits—Anecdote of Druſo the uſurer of Rome.

N° III. On the abſurdity of the general idea, that Genius dies for want of Patronage—Particular ſaying of a King of France on the above ſubject—The Paper concluded with examples from the lives of our own Poets.

N° IV. On the Poet Thomſon.

N° V. Continuation and concluſion of the preceding ſubject.

N° VI. Eſſay on carving—Low ſtate of this art in theſe kingdoms—Dr. William King's hiſtory of the diſcovery of knives and forks—Deſcription of the mode of carving in Rome—Some account of Profeſſor Trypherus and his ſchool.

N° VII. The bleſſings of temperance exemplified in the life of Lewis Cornaro.

N° VIII. On mediocrity—Singularity in manners and dreſs cenſured and condemned.

N° IX. The opinion ſupported, that Man is his own maker.

N° X. Of Converſation and Reaſoning—Account of Verax and Loquax—A note concerning the Barber-Surgeons.

N° XI. Cenſure on Epitaphs, with ſpecimens of ſeveral ſorts, and obſervations on the ſame.

N° XII. Critique on Shakeſpeare's play of Julius Cæſar.

N° XIII. Continuation and concluſion of the above.

N° XIV. Novel ideas on Education, with an entire new plan for the rearing of young Men.

N° XV. Shameful manner of conducting public funerals, introduced by obſervations on hereditary grief.

N° XVI. On Duelling—Schemes for the preſervation of the lives of his Majeſty's Subjects.

N° XVII. On the hardſhips our Dramatic Poets are ſubject to by the ſtrictneſs of the Ariſtotelian rules.

N° XVIII. Sketch of the life and writings of Nicholas Breton, a Poet in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, with quotations from his works.

N° XIX. On the dreadful degeneracy of the preſent age compared with the preceding, with illuſtrations.

N° XX. Concluding Paper—Portrait of the Author—Index to the whole, and liſt of errata.

FINIS.